WEDNESDAY JULY 8 1863.

THE FLORES VALUATION.

Probably nothing could be a more convincing proof of the unpopularity of the Flores revolution than the result of the Sunday meeting. On Saturday it was openly stated that over one thousand ounces would be collected the following day—that foreigners and natives, merchants, capitalists, brokers, and shopkeepers would assemble on the following morning and prove to the whole world the undying sympathy which was entertained for the avenger of Quinteros, in Buenos Ayres. So certain were the more zealous that the National Government began to be alarmed, and took every means, if not to oppose, at least to throw cold water on the affair. Poor Mr. Caron was perplexed what to do, as he was afraid that the Flores affair would terminate in the Policia, and that as the number of Flores' friends were represented to him by tens of thousands, of course the police force would be no mere before such a host. A certain amount of remark than even the Chief or the ministers: we prophesied it would be a contemptible failure, and said it has proved.

Our colleagues state that over 2000 citizens attended. For the honor and credit of Buenos Ayres be it mentioned this scandalous exaggeration. It is an insult to our society to suppose that at a meeting attended by 2,000 of our fellow-citizens that only 600 dropped paper dollars could be collected—no matter for what purpose.

Why, the paupers in Europe would think that we are a set of pie mince, starving revolutionary sympathisers, if they hear of this coincidental meeting attended by over 2000 of the principal citizens, and at which the price of a good horse was not realized.

Two thousand Buenos Ayreans subscribe about £200 sterling, for a good stallion of Quinteros, to strike down the Montevideen tyrant, to help ex-President Gen. Gregorio Flores, in his fight for the work of Oriental regeneration. Was ever such an unmitigated humbug before known or heard of?

The real friends of Flores, we hear, are furious, and charge the young gentlemen who got up the meeting with doing it to ruin their cause and destroy Don Venancio's prospects. One thing is certain—it has proved the full length and depth of the Flores sympathy in this city, and it will serve to convince numbers of our readers that General Mitre is opposed to revolution, as also all the wealthy portion of the community.

As a proof of what all the Tribuna talk in favor of Flores amounts to, we may remark that the Italians generally favored the meeting with his absence.

We doubt if even the ubiquitous C. was on the platform, with his friend J. Payne—another Englishman from Montevideo.

As lovers of peace, and sworn enemies of revolution, we congratulate our subjects of Montevideo on the result of the meeting. We call upon our colleagues in Montevideo to give the true version of the meeting, as published in our columns, and to contribute the humiliating slander that 2000 of the leading citizens of Buenos Ayres resolved to meet together at a public meeting in order to give, and notwithstanding the spouting of some embryo lawyers, not one work could either by deed or word be collected.

Why, it is sympathetic appeal we make for the family of a defunct washerwoman as we then double this sum would be collected. Flores, when he hears of the no-war meeting in this city, will say with Madibras—"Symathy without relief is like salt without roast-beef."

THE NEW CUSTOM-HOUSE LAW.

It is strange how in Buenos Ayres public attention fastens on trifles, and subjects of transcendant importance escape notice. To-day every one in the Republic who occupies his mind with politics is either studying the Free Park Bill, watching the career of the Clacho or solving the currency question, whilst almost unnoticed a law has just been passed in Congress more calculated to injure the material prospects of this country than even the rebellion of the Clacho or the depreciation of the currency.

The new Custom-house law stands a monument of Ministerial superficiality and of short-sighted blockheads, which no man in any other country in the world would have attempted to introduce.

The Argentine Republic is a young struggling country which as yet is unable to keep the balance of trade in its favour, owing to the alarming extravagance of the people and the limited character of its productions.

"Poincrease our exports and diminish our imports," is the foster home industry and tax foreign manufactures—should be the ambition of every Finance Minister who has the welfare of his country. Dr. Velez Sarsfield, our great Argentine financier, our profound, genius—may we say?—cunning Ministers all has done it, not only by his articles without which the country positively can produce nothing, but to lessen the taxes upon articles of luxury, the importation of which is greatly increasing that each day we are becoming more and more indebted to Europe.

Such the eleventh hour we raise our voice against this most monstrous of laws. Why is it that coal is to be taxed if not to shut up our mills and force us to consume foreign fuel, and ruin our present struggling steamboat interest, and send our steamers to Montevideo to coal instead?

Why is it that Lumber is taxed, if not to ruin the sheep farming business, and deprive the poor man of the cheap means of protecting his little flock of sheep, to stop the carpenters of the country from working, by forcing into competition New York ready made tables, chairs, windows, and doors.

Why are the implements of husbandry, such as ploughs, harrows, &c., taxed, if not to cripple the great agricultural industry of the country just in the very morning of its existence?

Why is unwrought iron taxed if not to prevent the few forges we have at present working?

Why are printing materials taxed, and books admitted free, if not to stunt the intellectual growth of our fellow citizens, and force them to send their manuscription to London or New York for publication, so as to make it free of duty, whilst here in Buenos Ayres every book printed in this republic will have to pay 22 per cent duty?

What, we indignantly demand, is the Minister's object in taxing thus our simple imports—the very life blood of the country—and in leaving unsaleable, bulk articles, idem our publishing business must be annihilated.

We throw down the new custom house law with a satirical smile at the noble patriotism of Dr. Sarsfield. We have thousands of men this very hour scouring the country for Urquiza's better far that we had one independent man in Congress to impeach the ministers before the house, and declare that the ruin of the country murdered, industry of the country what he means by such a tax?

NORMA.

This sublime opera came off on Monday night at Colon, before, if not a crowded, at least a very numerous audience. We have played to many which proved that the orchestra was well managed and well duly practised.

The opera commences with the Druids' scene, the march being played by a brass band behind the stage. The scene was both numerous, well dressed and well placed behind Norma Pollio we have little to say: his voice though not capacious is sweet, but he appears to want practice.

At the moment when the house was resound ng to the echoes of the Druid march, played by two bands and chanted by a numerous chorus, Norma appe ral. The scenic effect was grand full, thin, carefully attired, and with a most sylvan appearance, the graceful Molto ascended the Druids' altar, and in fresh, surveyed the rough. A breathless silence reigned through the house when majestically descending from the altar she recited the following lines to the Druids kneeling, the audience hushed, and the priestess personified by a graceful talented, and beautiful woman, how shall we describe Casta Diva.

With a sweetness indescribable, a precision shewing the consummate artiste, expressive becoming a diva, this immortal composition of Bellini was rendered not as might be expected in South America, but as it would be looked for in Paris, London, or Dublin.

Vitali, as Adalgisi, at first appeared rather weak, but when she took the audience by storm with "Mira Norma." The duet, "Yes, we together" when Norma overcomes her jealousy and dreams of reconciliation as in Dublin, was brought out fully sung. What we have seldom witnessed in Buenos Ayres, an enthusiastic expression of approval from the audience, was elicited at the end of this act. The acting so limitable, the singing so perfect, took the whole house by surprise, and the cries from the boxes of "Bravo Vitali" brought out four times to receive the applause of the captivated audience.

We regret, owing to want of space, we are obliged to shorten our remarks upon the best Norma ever before witnessed in Colon; but to few ladies have cause of gratulating the manner in which Mme Medlo sung "Where are now the hopes I have cherished." Every accomplished woman in Mme Medlo has the greater composition of the composer: for some the air has the most pleasing associations. We are happy to say the Prima Donna left it high and dry.

We are constant attendants at Colon. Nearly all the stars known to us we have heard, but we must candidly say that Mme Medlo in Norma is not no every day occurrence in Buenos Ayres. The manager of the company seems to have made a terrible mistake somewhere, regardless of expense—the scenes were all new, the chorus could be the usual number, a regular brass band put out the stage as in Paris—he deserves to be supported.

It is not our object to give expression to any severe remarks, or second the opinion of those who say that Colon is a failure, but we regret to see that such impressions. The thea tricals was comparatively empty, scarcely a lady in full dress to be seen in the theatre. We opine, however, that the cause was the piercing cold wind which may have frightened away our fair belles. In fact we are willing to believe that a great portion of the female portion of our society are destitute of true appreciation of the Lyric art.

EDITORS TABLE

The 'Nation Argentina' condemns the Flores meeting of last Sunday, stating "that a similar meeting in Montevideo to collect funds for the Clacho would be regarded as an act of hostility. The Argentine Government is not pleased at loggerheads with Chile for sending some armament to a friend of Clavero." Can we blow hot and cold by dolor towards Louis Oriental what we complain of in Chili?

The rise in subscription has injured the three new papers. Such are spired to bleed the public $10 per month. Over 1000 subscribers have "knocked off," and we learn the 900 Nacionalists are reduced to half that number, who still patronise the evening luminary.

The 'Pragbs' is verifying its appellation, having gained last week ninety subscribers, who formerly took the 'Nacional.' Freshmen are likely to have at last a respectable, lasting, daily paper, and we congratulate our foreign ally on his success and good arrangement of matter.

Doctors differ as to the number of persons in Barra's meeting. Some say 300, including anti-Florists, persons attracted by curiosity, mercenaries, orange vendors, &c. The general average is over 400 by 500. The 'Nacion Argentina,' who employs stencil, puts them down as 1,000, while the 'Nacional,' seeing double, makes them exceed 2000. The true average contribution of two paper dollars each in aid of Flores.

In many years long the anniversary of Argentine Independence, will be a civic holiday. The sticks for fireworks are erected in Plaza Victoria. The National Hymn will be sung at Colon services to giving Tryhala.

M. Cavenagi, by order of the Minister of Interior, received yesterday from 15 to 16 bales of cotton seed, containing 100lb., presented by Mr. Armstrong, and the Editors of this paper by rainbow distribution among agricultural families in the upper provinces.

It is believed the Chascomus Rifle Away is knocked on the head, that the Commissioners are resolved to report unfavourably, and that the professional gentlemen from London, who have lost so much valuable time, are to be ordered to England by the next packet. This will be the greatest misfortune that Buenos Ayres has experienced for many years.

We learn the 'Comercio' is about to come out twice a day. Such an innovation would be no less startling than the 'Standard' has been every succeeding, and we might have passed her but for the clearness of the night and the brilliancy of the stars.

Still we thought nothing of the matter and retired to rest, dreaming of anything but sea-fights, boarding, capture, burning, or the like. Next morning (June 2nd) as soon as we had sufficiently rubbed our eyes, we perceived a vessel apparently following our wake, which soon gave us the compliments of the season in a most musical salute—puff and bolsting the flag of St. George. We witnessed some pretty spectacles on Pittsburg Landing and Fredericksburg. Our new acquaintance had no appearance of either, and we therefore concluded we were all friends. We ran up also the stars and stripes, seeing which the Alabama—for she it was—clapped on more sail. We grew anxious—the first and did the same. A second blank shot! Presently our parsuer hoisted the Secession flag instead of the former, got up a white flannel, and, clambering her rack to bear on us a broadside fired a rifle-cannon shot. Luckily the ball fell short of us, otherwise it had been perfectly innocent of mischief as projectiles were for Old Abe or Jeff. Davis, as we should have all gone to Davy Jones' locker.

Captain Semmes next was 'growling' serious, and acted like Slick's raccoon, coming down directly. Meanwhile the Alabama steamed on steadily. If the chase had depended on wind and canvass we might have escaped, as we kept our distance, before that, in the most approved manner. We were able to recognise the enemy, from the pictures published of the Alabama, but I was surprised to find her painted grey, whereas she is represented of a grey or slate colour.

When she got alongside us and hoveled, the master's mate, with a round shot in each hand, over the gunwale with the friendly assurance that "he was very glad to see him," which the latter felt he could not reciprocate. Captain Loveland, in the presence of his redoubtable captain, betrayed the courage of Midshidas when he stood before Alexander the Great. He asked the fraternity of salt water, and offered Bonds to any amount, but all in vain. Semmes was inexorable; his orders remained for the Alabama not within half an hour the was set on fire. The captor upbraided us saying, you call us a pirate, a privateer, and you know that you are now prisoners of the Confederate cruiser Alabama, and it is my turn."

Fourteen companions in distress in the cabin of the Jabez Snow, who had fallen into Semmes' hands a few days previous. They informed us that when the Ella Warley burnt by the Alabama, besides several relics of outgoing Bonds payable three months after the recognition of Southern Independence. It seems the Alabama captures all vessels in the same manner as she did ours, keeping cigar constantly up to the last moment.

She co demns all the water necessary for use on board, and a constant watch is kept from the mast-heading look-out. The "seven deadly sins" are all by, and the boastful discipline so important that I have seen a order given 4 times before executed. She is a screw steamer of 1290 tons, armed with eight heavy rifle guns two of which are pivots, and manned by one hundred and fifty seamen, mostly of the Southern States, but including some Irishmen, Germans, Italians and others. Captain Semmes is a slim, fine looking man, of 5 st or 10 st 6 lbs, standing 6 feet 8 inches, grey-haired, and wearing moustache and imperial. He never eats or sleeps in the cabin with his officers, reserving some fine apartments for his private use.

The officers are all young men one is a brazier in-law to Jefferson Davis, two brothers to Captain Maffitt of the Confederate privateer Florida, and all are Americans.

The Captain of a vessel previously taken by the Alabama, at Rio secretised to her warlike name, being re- Semmes appropriates a family pewded by Pacific trading. Great irony is the order of the day, on the Alabama, the stores of captured vessels being generally saved. The first question put to us was, have you any wine on board? and indeed the privateers live like fighting cooks. At dinner we had roast fowl, pastry, pens, fruit, sliced peaches &c., and if our cabin had not been very confined, dark, and infected with cock-roaches bugs, and other offensive parasites, should have found a crui n in No 2 900 highly agreeable. Our captors were not ungrateful of receiving; having found in a magazine a nice picture of the Stars and Stripes, they cut a hole in the middle, and fastened it on a spittoon. Other-like the officers treated us with extreme personal civility.

We passed one night on board the Alabama, fearing we should soon be transhipped to a port of more cheery gentilation. Happily next morning we sighted two vessels, and bore down on one of them which proved to be the "Corsader," Hanoverian brig, bound for Rio Janeyro. The cannon and rat-hook no English, Semmes' officers never learned Dutch; he never, by force of a gun and the timely present of a chronometer, worth 250 dollars (taken from some Yankee ship), the Hanoverian was induced to offer accommodation for 6 or 7 passengers.

We were, all in number, then ordered to be ready, being first required to sign a parole of honour that we would never fight against the 3 Southern States unless formally exchanged; with the N. B. that if caught in breach of such promise we should be hanged. I protested to the lieutenant that I had nothing to do with the war, being an old resident, and therefore declined to sign it. The privateer replied there was no compulsion, and he would be happy to enjoy my company until I got on board the Hanoverian, when the rest and the survivors of the Jabez Snow and Amazonian with their luggage went on board the Wilder, along with the Captain and Commander, who provided for Semmes, who also gave the Dutchman an order on the American Consul at Rio, for passage-money.

Before leaving the Alabama I said to us "the other vessel in sight is an American, and if you look out you will see her burning in a couple of hours." Captain Semmes (June 4th or 5th) we only saw the blaze of the Amazonian, now 19 hrs a burning.

Our quarters in the Wilder were so confined that we slept three on one mattress, and the heat was great. It rained frequently, and when the hatches were shut down, it was fairly intolerable. At length, after 9 days we arrived safely in Rio Janeyro, where we landed, and the Dutch captain found, as I had told him, that Semmes order was worth nix." The Brazilian evening is always delightful, and here, I left it in the "Saint cap," where I found every accommodation, some of my companions in misfortune being provided with a put up by the American consul.

Once for all, in reply to a question a thousand times repeated, I assure all my friends that I like Buenos Ayres extremely, and find the people no wise different from our American cities. I lost nothing by the Alabama unless my love for a fine cigar, which I now get at Mantels and Pfeiffer, and I shall feel most happy to give such further explanations as may be required, in reference to my late adventure with Capt. Semmes.

P.S.—I forgot to mention that the Amazonian's mail-bags were destroyed, and I was informed they were the property of Messrs Frazer and Sandie. Numberless letters, &c., for their readers in Buenos Ayres, were probably sent by the Alabama. Her officers added me to themselves two boxes of books consigned to Rev. Mr. Goodfellow of this city.

A fine fat sheep from the Alabama, which we built by the subscriptions of 220 British merchants, for the Confederate States.

THE CORDOBA RAILWAY.

A gentleman just arrived from Rosario reports the works progressing rapidly, under the supervision of Messrs Frazer and Sandie. Two bridges have been completed, and Mr Cockburn Muir, agent of Peto Betts, declared the works were a credit, and reflected honour on the contractors and soon out of England. It is asserted that such is the zeal of the laborers they can hardly be driven to their work.

Several cities, Rosario is exceedingly dull, business at a standstill, communication with the interior almost destroyed, and the only life of it is now reduced to a few convivial English families.

ANOTHER CAPTURE.

The Alabama has taken the American barque Conrad, which recently left this port, with a cargo of wool, ship of by Anson Ayre Stanley and Hooper, for the United States. She was a very fast sailer, and has been converted into a privateer by Captain Semmes, who piloted a crew and armament on board. We understand the cargo was covered against all risk. It is thought the English animal will be cut up by the Alabama, as the cargo was registered British property

MISCELLANY.

PREVENTION OF PITTING IN SMALL-POX.—Not only in London, but in several other places in England and Scotland, is this handsome disease at present prevalent; and, in spite of vaccination, deaths have been very numerous, and not disfigurement to the face common. When unmodified, it is generally regarded as the grand preventive of the former result, and all but universally prescribed, it has long been felt that medical men would confer a great boon on society if they could discover some simple means by which the latter and less grave result could be prevented. We believe that, by a very simple application, this desirable end has been attained in the Clinical Wards in the Royal Infirmary; and it is the hope that when known it may be generally practised that we at present draw attention to it. The application consists of a solution of indiarubber in chloroform, which is painted over the face, and such in women—when the irruption has become fully developed. When the chloroform has evaporated, which it readily does, there is left a thin elastic film of indiarubber over the face. This the patient feels to be rather comfortable than otherwise, and when no disagreeable itchiness, as is usually complained of, is almost entirely removed, and, what is more important still, only once or sometimes and never two times, is thoroughly prevented which ever the solution is applied.

It may be as well to state that both rubber is for from being very soluble in chloroform, so that, in making the solution, the indiarubber must be cut into small pieces, and allowed to add full time to dissolve. The medical gentleman who has introduced this treatment has tried several other substances, but found none so generally useful. For instance, gutta-percha was tried. It has the advantage of being more soluble in chloroform, and would have even a very admirable application but for the tendency it has to peel off. Isinglass, in solution, has also been tried, or even common glue. The Indiarubber, on the other hand, is pliable and plastic, allowing free use of the features, without wrinkling, and Money rules excessively tight in our market at present. We know of an A No. 1 bill which was discounted this evening at 1 3/4 per cent." A little specie has come up to us from Montevideo—1800 sovereigns and 81 ounces. We expect more specie per Paven.

Mr Billinghurst will sell tomorrow Wednesday, all that carcase of the wrecked barque Resgadora, now lying on the beach, of iron and she lies clean on to the shore only 150 yards from dry land.
